Described by many as the best tribute to Queen, the most similar to the original, Break Free - Queen Tribute Show, is the Italian Queen Tribute show, enthusiastically received in Italy and across Europe. Starting from Vicenza, Veneto, they fill the squares and arenas of Europe and amaze thousands of spectators; With the show "Long Live the Queen" theaters have reached sold-out in record time. Queen, the English rock band, was well-known for its live performances; Large sound and lighting systems, innovative pyrotechnics and extravagant costumes have always shown their theatrical nature and many songs such as "We Will Rock You" and "We Are the Champions" have been written with the specific goal of getting the audience emotionally involved. Artists such as Bob Geldof, David Bowie, George Michael, Kurt Cobain, and Robbie Williams expressed their admiration for the stage presence of singer Freddie Mercury.

Even today Queen fascinate by audiences all over the world, even without Freddie Mercury, The Queen + Adam Lambert Tour 2014-2015 has collected 68.7 million dollars. In December 2005, Queen announced that they overtook the Beatles and became the third most popular show of all time, in terms of albums, singles, videos and downloads sold. Even today, Queen is the third best-selling act in Europe and the seventh in the world.

The aim of Break Free - Queen Tribute Show is to offer an exciting experience recreating as faithfully as possible a legendary Queen concert. Image and sound are continually studied in detail to achieve this goal. Thanks to their experience in the international music scene, Break Free's show is greeted with enthusiasm all over Europe. They fill the squares and amaze thousands of viewers.

Giuseppe Malinconico, the band's singer, has been described by many fans as the best Freddie Mercury after the legend himself and his live performances prove it. Giuseppe has meticulously analyzed and embodied the body language of Freddie Mercury on stage, his vocal timbre, extension, accent, pronunciation and all that is necessary to create the illusion of seeing the legend on stage. The same applies to the rest of the band's members who recreate Queen's sound, movements and energy: Brian, Roger and John's style is meticulously reinterpreted by Paolo Barbieri, Kim Marino and Sebastiano Zanotto. The band's energy really honors Queen's best performances in their golden years, and modern equipment and technical know-how make Break Free's show extremely appealing to the modern public.

The proof of this is that after only a few months after the birth of Break Free, their concerts already fill entire squares and theaters, both in Italy and abroad. All ticket shows have reached sold out so far.
